I should have mentioned, I can go there too for the site walkover. Maintaining social distancing and all. It is hard to imagine that the FYR is coming up.

Larry,

I guess it's all a bit of an adjustment for everyone. We're all remote now. It's not that big a deal on a day-to-day basis because we're set up to do it. Four guys on horses opening up seals could appear in the sky and I'd still be working! Hope you're in a good situation.

As for Keystone, it seems the PRPs don't have any issues so far with keeping their respective systems maintained and running. I believe on-going Superfund work fits into under waste management/remedial Governor Wolf's declaration. Waste management/remedial services seems to be permissible and the PRPs are continuing operation, so there doesn't seem to be a need to identify whether CERCLA investigations and response actions can continue. At some point in a few weeks, I'll be making a solo trip out to the LF to conduct the FYR inspection. I can do this from home to the site and back again, so I'm sure I'll get approval for travel. I'm going to wait until the first wave passes and assess after that before going.

Let me know if you need anything, and stay safe – Chris

Chris,
How are you managing during these trying times?

Larry
